Class History 29-A

In his Presentation Speech at Commencement, the President of the Class of '29-A, Victor Dobras, gave a brief resume of the history and accomplishments of his class. In response to numerous requests made by members of the student body, the Scimitar Staff submits for publication the following excerpt from his speech:

Fellow citizens, chagrined taxpayers, and parents:

Tonight we meet in commemoration of an event which represents the consummation of four years' hard unmitigated study. (Loud guffaws, but the speaker continues desperately.)

Four years ago we entered this noble institution in a most deplorable state of mediocrity—mere Freshmen, with a hard and dubious future. (The Class of '29-A falls to sobbing at the recollection of it all.)

But we were not to be discouraged! No, indeed. Not us, with that Kentucky blue blood in our veins! We fought! long and valiantly, and now, the fort is ours! (But the audience didn't seem to care a darn.) Freshman Algebra, English, Latin, and the rest—they all lay conquered at our feet. But woe to him who, lured on by a false sense of security, fell to the wayside dissipating in College Humor and malted milks.

Now the Sophomore year, folks, could be compared to the Freshmen year in only one way. It was lots worse. The way the Seniors treated us Sophies was simply scandalous. Just why I don't know. We were pretty good looking at a distance. I guess we couldn't get far enough away to suit them. And then the way they referred to us as mental defectives and inebriates, and such names not even fit for the faculty. One fellow in particular said he thought we were a bargain because we were half off. A person like that ought to have two necks so they could hang him by both.

Thank God there is an end to all evil. The Junior year was vastly more enjoyable than the Sophomore year. Of course any change would have been an improvement. We took a greater part in school activities. We weren't such a hot sketch in the class room, but we sure were the big noise at the library. At any rate we were no longer counted such a disgrace to the school as previously.

But, ladies and gentlemen, the best was yet to come. The Senior year, with its banquets, parties, intelligence tests, gum-chewing, and ninth periods. This class, contrary to the expectations of the faculty, made a very creditable showing in scholarship. Grace Hug was the honor student. Other students distinguished themselves in various ways. Paul Penfield, for example, claims the distinction of being almost hit once by a Rolls-Royce. Some of the class shieks bought derbies and wore them after dark but most of us clung to the theory that the only proper place for a derby is at the end of a slide-trombone. In spite of everything however, we find ourselves here tonight, a class that Lorain High School may well be proud of, and a class that IS proud of L. H. S.

CROSSING THE BAR

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark!

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

—Tennyson.

Class History 29-B

After climbing many stairs, little Betty came to a door. She opened it and found herself in a dark attic room. A ray of light shown upon an old trunk, covered with the dust of many years. She raised the cover. An interesting array of clippings, papers, letters and books attracted her eye. Gathering many of them in her arms, she carried them to her grandfather, seated in a large armchair, before the crackling fire, leisurely smoking his pipe.

"Grandpop, what are all these things I found in the trunk?"

"Well, well, well, Betty! I haven't seen those things in years! They are memoirs of my High School days. Hand me that large book with the ship on the cover, and let me again look at my classmates."

The old man slowly leafed through the book, gazing at the pictures which brought back old memories.

He again lived the first day he entered the stately portals of Lorain High School.

He remembered how unnecessary he felt, walking down the long, strange corridors among the more confident upper classmen.

How important he felt marching down the hall to take a seat (?) in the auditorium for the annual opening exercises!

To him came the minutes of anxious waiting, hoping that the period would end before Miss Watson asked him to put the problem on the board that he didn't have.

September again rolled around, with the sophomores entering the school with more confidence than the year before. With their sophomore year came the opportunity to show their ability in the use of the flowery French, to surprise their friends by the demonstration of deep problems in a Mathematics Club, to interpret laws in the Commercial Law Club, to bring forth their musical talents in the various musical organizations, and perform duties in other improvement clubs.

With the opening of their junior year, came the realization that they had only two more short years to spend in the school that had come to mean so much to them.

At last they were on the second floor, where seniors and juniors reign supreme, and where, as freshmen, they had longed to be.

Then came the senior year! The year when they were the models of school citizens. Those who were chosen to be hosts, hostesses and on the program of the Senior A-B banquet lived the happiest and most exciting moments of their school life. The banquet, with all the pomp, accompanying show was an event never to be forgotten.

During the first part of the senior A year came the election of officers and the appointment of various committees. Then came the selection of pins, colors, invitations, a motto, and then a sitting at Moc's Studio!

The snapshots, jokes, and write-ups for the annual Scimitar offered both hard work and excitement for those involved.

Still happier moments were to come when on that Friday morning several of the class were elected to the distinguished National Honor Society.

These pleasures had hardly gotten a good beginning, when another Senior A-B banquet was to be attended—the last for the class of '29-B.

The picture of that graduation night, when each was paid in accordance to what he had done, came to the old gentleman. Now as he sat beside the fireplace dreamily smoking his pipe, the smoke rings gradually encircled his head like a halo, as he recalled all that remained of those happy high school days—Memories!

From the Journal of One, John Crichton

April 24, 1927.

It is awful! To see him day after day; and to know him; to hate him and yet to realize that he has the one thing in life I want! I may be an eccentric old fool—there are plenty of other diamonds in the world, but I want that one. If I didn't have to meet him day after day, didn't have to discuss trivialities with him, when my whole soul revolts at the sight of him it wouldn't be so bad. I feel Bancock understands my attitude and that makes it worse. He is always making the conversation revolve around his most famous possession—that damn marquise diamond! I'll get it yet; I've got to!

April 29.

I had lunch with Bancock today; business matters to discuss. He told me he had another chance to sell his diamond, but that he'd refused—said he'd never part with it as long as he lived. Bancock knows I'd give half of my fortune for that stone. This is getting to be an obsession with me.

May 10.

I picked up the paper today and almost fell over. Bancock dead! It hardly seems possible—a stroke, and in a few hours it was all over. He wasn't such a bad sort when one thinks it over—just justifiably proud of his diamond and anxious to impress every one by it, especially me.

Bancock's lawyers called me up this afternoon to say that there is something in the will which would interest me. It might be—no, how ridiculous!

May 11.

I went to Bancock's office last night and that I am not totally insane by now is a wonder. To talk of the dead is a sin; but when a man is the devil incarnate, anything is justifiable. I entered the office and sat down; the tedious process began. It was boring, and I couldn't imagine why I had been called, until suddenly I was drawn from a daze by the sound of my name. Bancock's lawyer was rising and coming toward me. In his right hand was an envelope, and, in the left, a small black box. The only words on his tongue expressed the request that I should not open it except in privacy. Finally the conference was over and I quickly retreated to my home to open that envelope and to be hurled into despair. The message read:

My dear Crichton:

Knowing your appreciation of the diamond, I have decided that you are the most suitable person to possess it. So in the black box which you hold you will find directions which will lead you to my store. But when you turn a lock on that box you will release a catch to a chamber containing sulphuric acid. This will entirely destroy the paper disclosing the secret hiding place and the diamond will be lost forever. So near and yet so far! Take your choice, my dear man.

Respectfully yours,

J. H. Bancock.

Scimitar

It is so ridiculous! In my two hands I held a box which would lead me to the thing I crave. Did Bancock do this on purpose? The diamond can do him no good where he is now; was it only to torment me? Why? Why?

May 13.

I had the box examined today. It was X-rayed; the truth was revealed. The acid's there. Now I'm worse off than I was; before I had hope but now—nothing! The mind certainly has the physical in control—was ever a man in such a deplorable condition!

May 14.

I didn't sleep a minute last night, thinking how wonderful it would be to have that diamond. Last night I determined I would risk everything to open that box. Now I don't think the risk is worth while.

I had a peculiar feeling in my head this morning; a peculiar dizziness and then a pain in my heart. Nothing serious, though of course.

May 19.

Haven't been feeling quite up to par lately. The pain keeps recurring. Oh! Oh! that pain! Again! I'd better stop. It gets rather bad at times.

May 20.

I know the truth now; it's a matter of days. The doctor told me if my mind were at ease there would be hope. Mind at ease! Impossible! And now that I know I won't be here long, why don't I open the box? If the papers were destroyed, well and good! I would at least feel I could have done no different. Again I say—maybe—tomorrow.

Mr. Crichton passed away June 17. He had been ill three weeks. Towards the end he told me of this journal and asked me to publish it as a warning and to add these words:

"Never let anything become so important in your life, that you cannot live without it—that destroys happiness."

The Rower

Around the bend of the rushing river, battling with the angry waters, a canoe is seen swiftly approaching. The hot June sun glistens upon the bronzed back of its lone occupant, who with even, unfaltering strokes, wields the paddle of his home-made birch-bark canoe. He shows great strength, this monarch of the wilderness. The muscles of the Indian's copper-skinned back ripple and curl with the same clock-like precision as does the paddle. The hard even breathing of the Indian is marked by the great expansion of his broad chest. His shoulders heave with their mighty exertions. His arms bend and straighten, and the muscles seem to laugh and twinkle as they appear and disappear at the same time as does the paddle. A pair of large, bony hands grasp the paddle with a hard, firm grip. The canoe passes on and finally disappears as it rounds another bend in the river.

Just as the canoe has passed, so has the Indian vanished from our country. The river is the world, the path of the Indian's canoe is America. The bend of the river is civilization. Yet the river runs on in its same course after the disappearance of the Indian as it had gone on its way to the sea before his coming.

Spain

Moonkissed nights and murmuring trees,
Perfume of roses in the breeze,
Gossamer clouds in the star-studded skies,
Burning admiration in a lover's eyes.

Alluring charms, bewitching guiles,
Radiant features wreathed in smiles,
Brilliant lights—oh shadows, too,
Dazzling gems of every hue.

It seems a fairyland, in truth,
This wondrous place of joy and youth;
This land where joy and beauty reign
Oh, 'tis the land of love—'tis Spain.

What Is Man

As here I sit and gaze on sky above
And see the purple hues of sunset fade
Into the duller tones of pastel shades,
My head is filled with wond'ring and with love
Of every robin, sparrow, lark and dove,
Of flower, tree, and lake that God has made;
And as I watch each law obeyed,
I marvel at wise nature's treasure trove;
Then I began to ponder, "What is man?"
And realize how wrong to think we keep
All things in our control. We understand
(Tis true indeed) so little of God's plan,
That folly 'tis and wrong, for us to seek
To under-rate the power of his great hand.

Common House Cat

Any cat is a true house cat, so long as she prefers a mouse or the delight of sneaking upon an inattentive sparrow, or a platter of milk, which her mistress gives her without any effort on her part. Purring around the house, rubbing against the legs of home-folks and spitting at Rover from the vantage point of a tree are common characteristics of the Angora cat. There cats remain spry and alert as do men affected by nature.

Cats may be just cats, but I love the Angora variety. I have played with them when I was very young, and do so even now. Their intelligence and love for the home is amazing. They are every inch the aristocrats of Catdom; to be sure there are none finer and better.

They are playful beyond comparison—as good natured as many people. What could be sweeter than to have a true companion sitting at your side purring, as it rolls from side to side, eyeing you with eyes that seem to tell you a story? No, indeed. I wouldn't give the world for that. The sight of her rubbing her face with her paw, which she licks at intervals while basking in the sunshine can be compared to any vodvil sketch. The pleasure of having her come to me at the call of her name, just as a child would, is joy in itself. When company calls, the Angoras are perfect ladies, having nothing to do but sit and listen to the praises of the callers.

Yes, sir! You can have your radio, but give me my good old cat, and I'll have "p-r-r-s" turned into music as sweet as any radio can give.

Typewriting

Tap, tap, tap—"Oh, I struck the wrong key," b-ring, tap, tap, tap—"Good grief, will I ever get this exercise typed correctly?"

These and numerous other pathetic moans may be heard pouring from Room C-1. Why? Well you see, in this room are stationed about fifty typewriters—Underwoods, Remingtons, Royals or what have you—on which ambitious students learn the tricky operations of the typing machine.

It is my warning to anyone who is easily irritated at any slight mishap never to attempt to run a typewriter, because that art would certainly make a nervous wreck of him.

I have good reason to say this, because I myself have felt extreme nervousness when day after day I struggled with my Underwood trying hard to type correctly the assignments given me. Many times I am successful, but more numerous are the times when I have to retype a whole sheet of typed matter simply because, when almost at the end of an exercise my finger slipped, struck a wrong key and lo! produced a mistake which made the whole assignment incorrect.

To all would-be typists, the best advice for anyone to follow is found in the three watchwords of typing—Perseverance, Accuracy, and finally the everlasting sought for quality, Speed!

The Charge of the Lunch Brigade

(Parody on "The Charge of the Light Brigade")

Half-a-foot, half-a-foot,
Half-a-foot onward,
All in an awful rush
Came the six hundred.
Forward the Lunch Brigade
"Charge for the trays," they said.
Into the crowded room
Charged the six hundred.
Dishes to right of them,
Dishes to left of them,

Dishes behind them,
Clattered and thundered.
Those who have modest means
Just two bits in their jeans

Must grab up pork and beans.
But—those who have lotta kale
Can have a full dinner pail—
Chicken, pie, and ginger ale.
But all of them eat full well.
All the six hundred.

When can their hunger fade?
Oh, the wild charge they made,
The teachers all wondered,
Marvel the charge they made;
Honor the Lunch Brigade;
Hungry six hundred.

Catching a Fish

Two years ago, I spent my summer vacation with an aunt and uncle who own a farm on the shores of Sandusky Bay. About nine o'clock one morning my cousin and I decided to go fishing. While my cousin was getting the poles and worms I went into the house and, with the help of my aunt, packed a lunch and filled a thermos bottle with cold well water. Having done this, I went up to the attic where I found two straw hats with large brims, because I knew the sun would be very hot later in the day. Then we set out for the bay, which was about a fourth of a mile from the house.

Having reached the bay we got into the rowboat and decided that before we started to fish, we would run the night-line. We caught two medium sized catfish and a small perch, and then went out farther into the middle of the bay and dropped anchor, ready to fish. We stayed in this place about twenty minutes, and having only a few bites, decided to move.

After moving, we cast our lines again, and in a few minutes, my cousin had caught a fish. It was a good sized bass. This made me angry because I had wanted to have the honor of catching the first fish. Then I decided that I was going to catch a larger one than his, although it would not be the first one caught. All of a sudden there was a gentle tug at my line. First there were two short tugs, then a longer one, and then the bobber went clear under the surface of the water and there was a heavy tug on the pole. I jerked it out and there to my surprise was a large catfish. I quickly baited the line again and put it back into the water, in hopes of catching another large fish, but after that, our luck was poor, and as we were getting hungry, we unpacked the lunch and ate our dinner.

After we had finished eating, we again changed our position and cast our lines in hopes of having more luck. At the end of a few hours, my cousin had caught one perch and two bullheads, while I had caught only one perch. As the sun was very hot and our luck was gone, we decided to go back to the farmhouse.

We drew in the lines and my cousin turned the boat around and started for home. As we drew near to the shore, all of a sudden there was a splash in the water, and a large black bass landed in the boat at my feet. It was larger than any of the fish we had caught, and I later found the weight to be a little less than five pounds. The oar had hit the fish, and as bass often do jump into the air, it jumped and landed in the boat.

Superstition

More people are superstitious than are willing to admit the fact. From bygone ages to modern times, both high and low, rich and poor, educated and ignorant, have yielded to some curious vein of fancy that leads them to expect "luck" or success more readily if certain whimsical conditions are complied with. Who has not, at some time, felt the power of one or another of the odd ideas that seem to have such a firm hold on the mind of man? Laugh it off if we will, declare it non-sense as we know it to be, still there is the tendency to put an unreasoning half belief in it.

Do we not all know those who are nervous with fear if salt is spilled; who would go without a meal rather than be one of thirteen at table; who ever began any important work on a Friday; who are careful to take their first sight of the new moon over their right shoulder instead of the left; who rejoice in the finding of a four-leafed clover?

"Luck" is a plant that grows from a seed; and the seed sown is the kind of thoughts we entertain; ideas about ourselves, about God, about our work, and about the rest of the world.

Thoughts can be chosen. If we think ourselves weak and inferior, we invite failure; because then the work that we do will not be our best, and will be surpassed in value by that of others.

If we think instead, "I can do this work better than it has ever been done before—and I will," the seed will grow and bear fruit in results to ourselves and others.

To Music

Oh, Music, you enchant earthly mortals;
With your ethereal tones so sublime.
You open to us heaven's portals,
Let us enter a realm so divine.

Flooding our lives with joys supreme,
Lifting us out of our sorrow.
Filling our hearts with a joyous dream
Of a glorious, fair tomorrow.

Oh, Music, how drear life would seem,
Were we never again to hear
Tones that descend like heaven's beams
Banishing life's petty fears.

Between the goal-posts; row on row
Our pigskin heroes sadly sprawl.

The opponent, Heights—1 minute to go.

We saw, we heard a football go
Thru goal-posts for a three point gain
In Recreation Field.

Yes, fight, you heroes, fight, win fame.

An Interview With Messrs. Stone and Fisher

"Has she an appointment card?" asked the short, stout, gray haired Mr. Fisher.
"She has, sir. Will you see her?" this from the office man.
"All right, send her in," yawned Fisher. "Hey—Stone—busy? No? then come in. That Peaches Wenbury is here."

"Peaches Wenbury? Who's she?"

"Ah—that flapper who won the beauty contest at Kingston college up north!"

"Coming, was the reply——"

"Let's see how you would act if you were happy," commanded Fisher, as he viewed her. She was of a good height, well-built, had a fair complexion and fluffy blond hair.

The young girl of nineteen years tried her best, but didn't succeed very well.

"Let's have some sorrow," put in Stone.

Peaches sat down in a near-by chair, looked at the walls and spied a picture of a young man in a military uniform. An inspiration! Putting her hands to her face she cried out, "Is it tr-true John? Are y-y-you gone for ev-ver?" Then she sank on her knees and pretended to weep. She tried her best to force tears but none were available. She sat down on the floor and wailed. "Now I must suffer all my sorrow alone. The war has taken you. Oh-h-hoh-h-h."

"Sa-ay, that's my son!" from Fisher. "Ya didn't need to pick on him for your sob stuff!"

"I think she's be best in comedies," said Stone. "Register stupidity."

Stupidness???? How should she register stupidity? She was puzzled and asked in a very natural way, "How do you do it? I don't know how."

Great! exclaimed Fisher.

The Radio

To my mind the radio is the greatest invention of the twentieth century. Its development has been rapid. Most of the students of our own high school can even remember well when the industry was in its infancy. Eight years ago I doubt if one family in a thousand possessed one, and today it is difficult to find a family that is not the proud owner of a seven tube Super-Iodine receiver. Only sixty-three more payments and the thing is theirs.

The early sets were usually very ugly, bulky, full of cat calls, whistles, thunder-storms and other sound effects.

The first few years were devoted to eliminating the afore enumerated unearthly sounds that accompanied every program. Today the radio is being art-i-fied. We find them disguised as medicine chests, hope chests, pirates chests, phonographs, sewing machines, bookcases, secretaries and even Spanish Galleons.

You may buy your parts for twelve ninety-eight and build your own or pay two to four hundred dollars for a beautiful cabinet all covered with gim cracks and filled (partly) with a receiving set that is not a good radio, a cabinet that is a work of art, and a phonograph, icebox, or bookcase all (built in) thrown in for good measure. The newest sets are all equipped with the latest lighting effects. I suppose the thirty models will have parking lights and a stop light. Television, too, is not far away. Dozens of manufacturers are busy day and night keeping up with their orders and the bank accounts of good (?) cabinet makers and radio engineers are swelling rapidly.

Three years, yea, even two years ago if you got Muskatine, Iowa, or Havana, Cuba, you were overjoyed. Today if you can't get Hong Kong, Honolulu, Siam or Moscow (Station BOMSKI) the first night you send your set right back to the dealer.

During the recent election campaign both parties made use of the radio for whispering (?) and other mud-slinging activities. The total radio bill of the Republican and Democratic parties ran into two millions so you see this broadcasting is nothing for anyone but bank presidents, fight promoters, bootleggers and public service corporation directors to play with.

If you are not already aware of the fact I will tell you that the broadcasting system was in a very bad condition a few months ago. Stations were as thick as Scotchmen at a free picnic (almost).

Well after some time the big chiefs decided that something simply must be done so a radio commission got together down in Washington to control the situation. Well you know, I know, we all know, what these commissions will do. Talk about controlling the situation, they fixed it. They weeded out the best stations and intelligently moved all the rest of them over on wave lengths that were already overcrowded and now just try and tune in on the result (!?!?!?—?!*!?)

This is station EXIT signing off, Goodbye now! (Radio).

Solitude

Ever since I can recall, I always noticed that persons do not always enjoy company. There are times when one will become very angry if he is disturbed. Several times in my earlier years my father requested me to leave the room so that he could be alone. I was puzzled at his action for I always thought one enjoyed companionship but now, even I, myself, enjoy a spell of solitude now and then.

There are many persons who cannot remain at home alone and enjoy themselves. They require outside amusement such as attending a theater or other places of recreation. On the other hand many persons remain at home in solitude and can manage to amuse themselves without thinking they are alone.

Whenever anyone has to do some deep thinking, he can accomplish it much more easily if he is in complete solitude. Sometimes it seems as if one would have to turn hermit now and then, so that he could be alone and no one could bother him.

It seems to me that there is no one who does not enjoy solitude in some form or other, but as for me there are times when I would enjoy nothing better than to sit under a large oak tree in a green forest and day-dream to my heart's content.

Create

Create! It is the first desire, it seems,
Breathed in man's soul ere he was more than clay;
To build, to paint, to love, to dream His dreams
To live His span of life in His own way.
Stone upon stone with patient hand he placed,
Till temples stood where naught had been before;
And acres blossomed which had once been waste,
And beauty everywhere was only more.
Create! From all who live, both high and low,
From out each soul some lovely thing is brought
To help the world cast off its care and woe
And glory in the treasures that are wrought;
Create! How can we stop until the breath
Of life has fled and we have passed to death.

The Captain of An Ocean Liner

One day while we were on our trip to America, aboard the S.S. Columbia, I decided to get a picture of the captain at his post on the bridge.

We were not allowed on the bridge so I took a forward deck chair, and turned it around so that I faced him and his officers.

As I was waiting for him to get in a position where I could "snap" him, I noticed that his face was brown, weather-beaten, with quite a few wrinkles on his forehead. A lock of brown hair hung down below his blue naval cap. He had a look on his face, which showed he was kind but strict. As he peered across the water, a person could see that his eyes were accustomed to such a strain. He wore a blue coat and white pants, which showed wear in one or two places where he had probably ripped them. His features to me seemed to show that he was a man who believed in working while at work, and playing while at play. Many times I had seen him play tennis, and he was the jolliest person in the crowd. He suddenly moved toward me; my camera clicked, and my job was done.

Since then I have lost the film, but I often wonder if the camera saw what I saw in the features of that man.

May

I like a quiet night in May
When stars are shining bright,
When old Sol forsakes the day
And turns her into night.

It's then that evening breezes blow,
And soothe away your care,
And bending boughs with grass below;
Seem to beckon there.

It's then that the enchanting moon aloof—
Seems to understand,
And shines her message on your roof.
With friendly outstretched hand,

May, the month of beauty
When spring is in her prime,
Feels it is her duty
To make life more sublime.

So with your eyes and with your ears,
Look, listen, and then say —
"Of all the months in my few years
The best of all is May!"

Undecided

What fun a mermaid's life would be
Far 'neath the briny deep;
To live in shells, which hold just me,
Where curled like a snail I'd sleep!

What fun to play with oysters gay,
To pull a fish's tail,
To rock the boats on a stormy day,
Or catch and hold a sail.

To drift and swim with careless grace,
To trap the sailors brave
With siren calls or pretty face,
To catch them in a wave.

To gown ourselves with seaweed strands,
Have starfish for our hair;
Then pose upon the silver sands,
The fairest of the fair.

Shall then we with the oysters play
And fish's tails watch fan
While sailors, too, may go astray;
Or shall we stay on land?

A Deserted Farmhouse

On the road that leads to Amherst one can see many farmhouses, but the one of greatest attraction is deserted.

It stands a few feet away from the road. The chimney is almost gone with the exception of a few bricks that had more mortar on them than the others. The roof is made of shingles, or was, for in some places they are missing. The house is a framework building and needs painting badly. It has many windows of modern length and width but in some the glass is broken, and boards are nailed there. In the olden times shutters were used, and there are still some on the windows.

There is a porch composed of a little roof supported by medium sized poles; on each side is a small railing. The house is surrounded by large oaks that reach their arms over the house casting a shade. On the grass are shingles that have fallen from the roof and are slowly rotting away. In front of the house is a wooden mailbox, and on it is carved "The Deserted Farmhouse," the only name by which the settlers ever call the forlorn landmark.

Main Street on a Wet Day

Drip, drip, came the accompaniment to my thoughts as I sat on a soap box in the corner of the old general store and gazed out the window—gray clouds, muddy streets, rain, fast melting ice, fog. Just then the loud voice of a coachman filtered indistinctly through the fog. As he came nearer, his voice and words became audible—I could hear "Hold your greys, there now, back! B a c k! Hold now, ahead, there!!"

A few moments later a mud-spattered coach came into view. It stopped. The coachman shouted fiercely but in vain. I knew it was of no avail for I had seen coaches of lesser weights sink here.

I rose, took the soap box upon which I had been sitting and made a sort of bridge across the mud road from the board walk to the carriage. A gentleman stepped forth and assisted two ladies across.

As I escorted them to my place of residence, visions of Sir Walter Raleigh flitted through my mind, for although neither of the ladies was a queen, one was beautiful enough to have been.

The Sunday School

Danny, Elsie, and June, all dressed in their Sunday clothes, hurrying along to Sunday School. That is, Elsie and June were walking along swiftly; Danny was being dragged.

Danny and twelve other hoydens, were in a class assigned to Mrs. Blair, a timid, frightened person who was deathly afraid of her thirteen charges.

After they had sung a song the curtains were drawn around their class and lessons were supposed to begin. Mrs. Blair began with the ten commandments, and the boys began with rubber bands, paper wads, sling slots, and needles.

Danny had a needle and was employed in keeping the boy in front of him moving around into all corners of his seat.

John had a rubber band and a number of wads and succeeded in making half the class put their feet on the benches and pull up their collars.

Ed had a sling shot and was shooting out of the open window at some birds.

The Reverend Mr. Dunstan then came into the class. Feet were removed from the benches, collars turned down, toys and instruments of torture hidden, with the swiftness which only boys in mischief can employ.

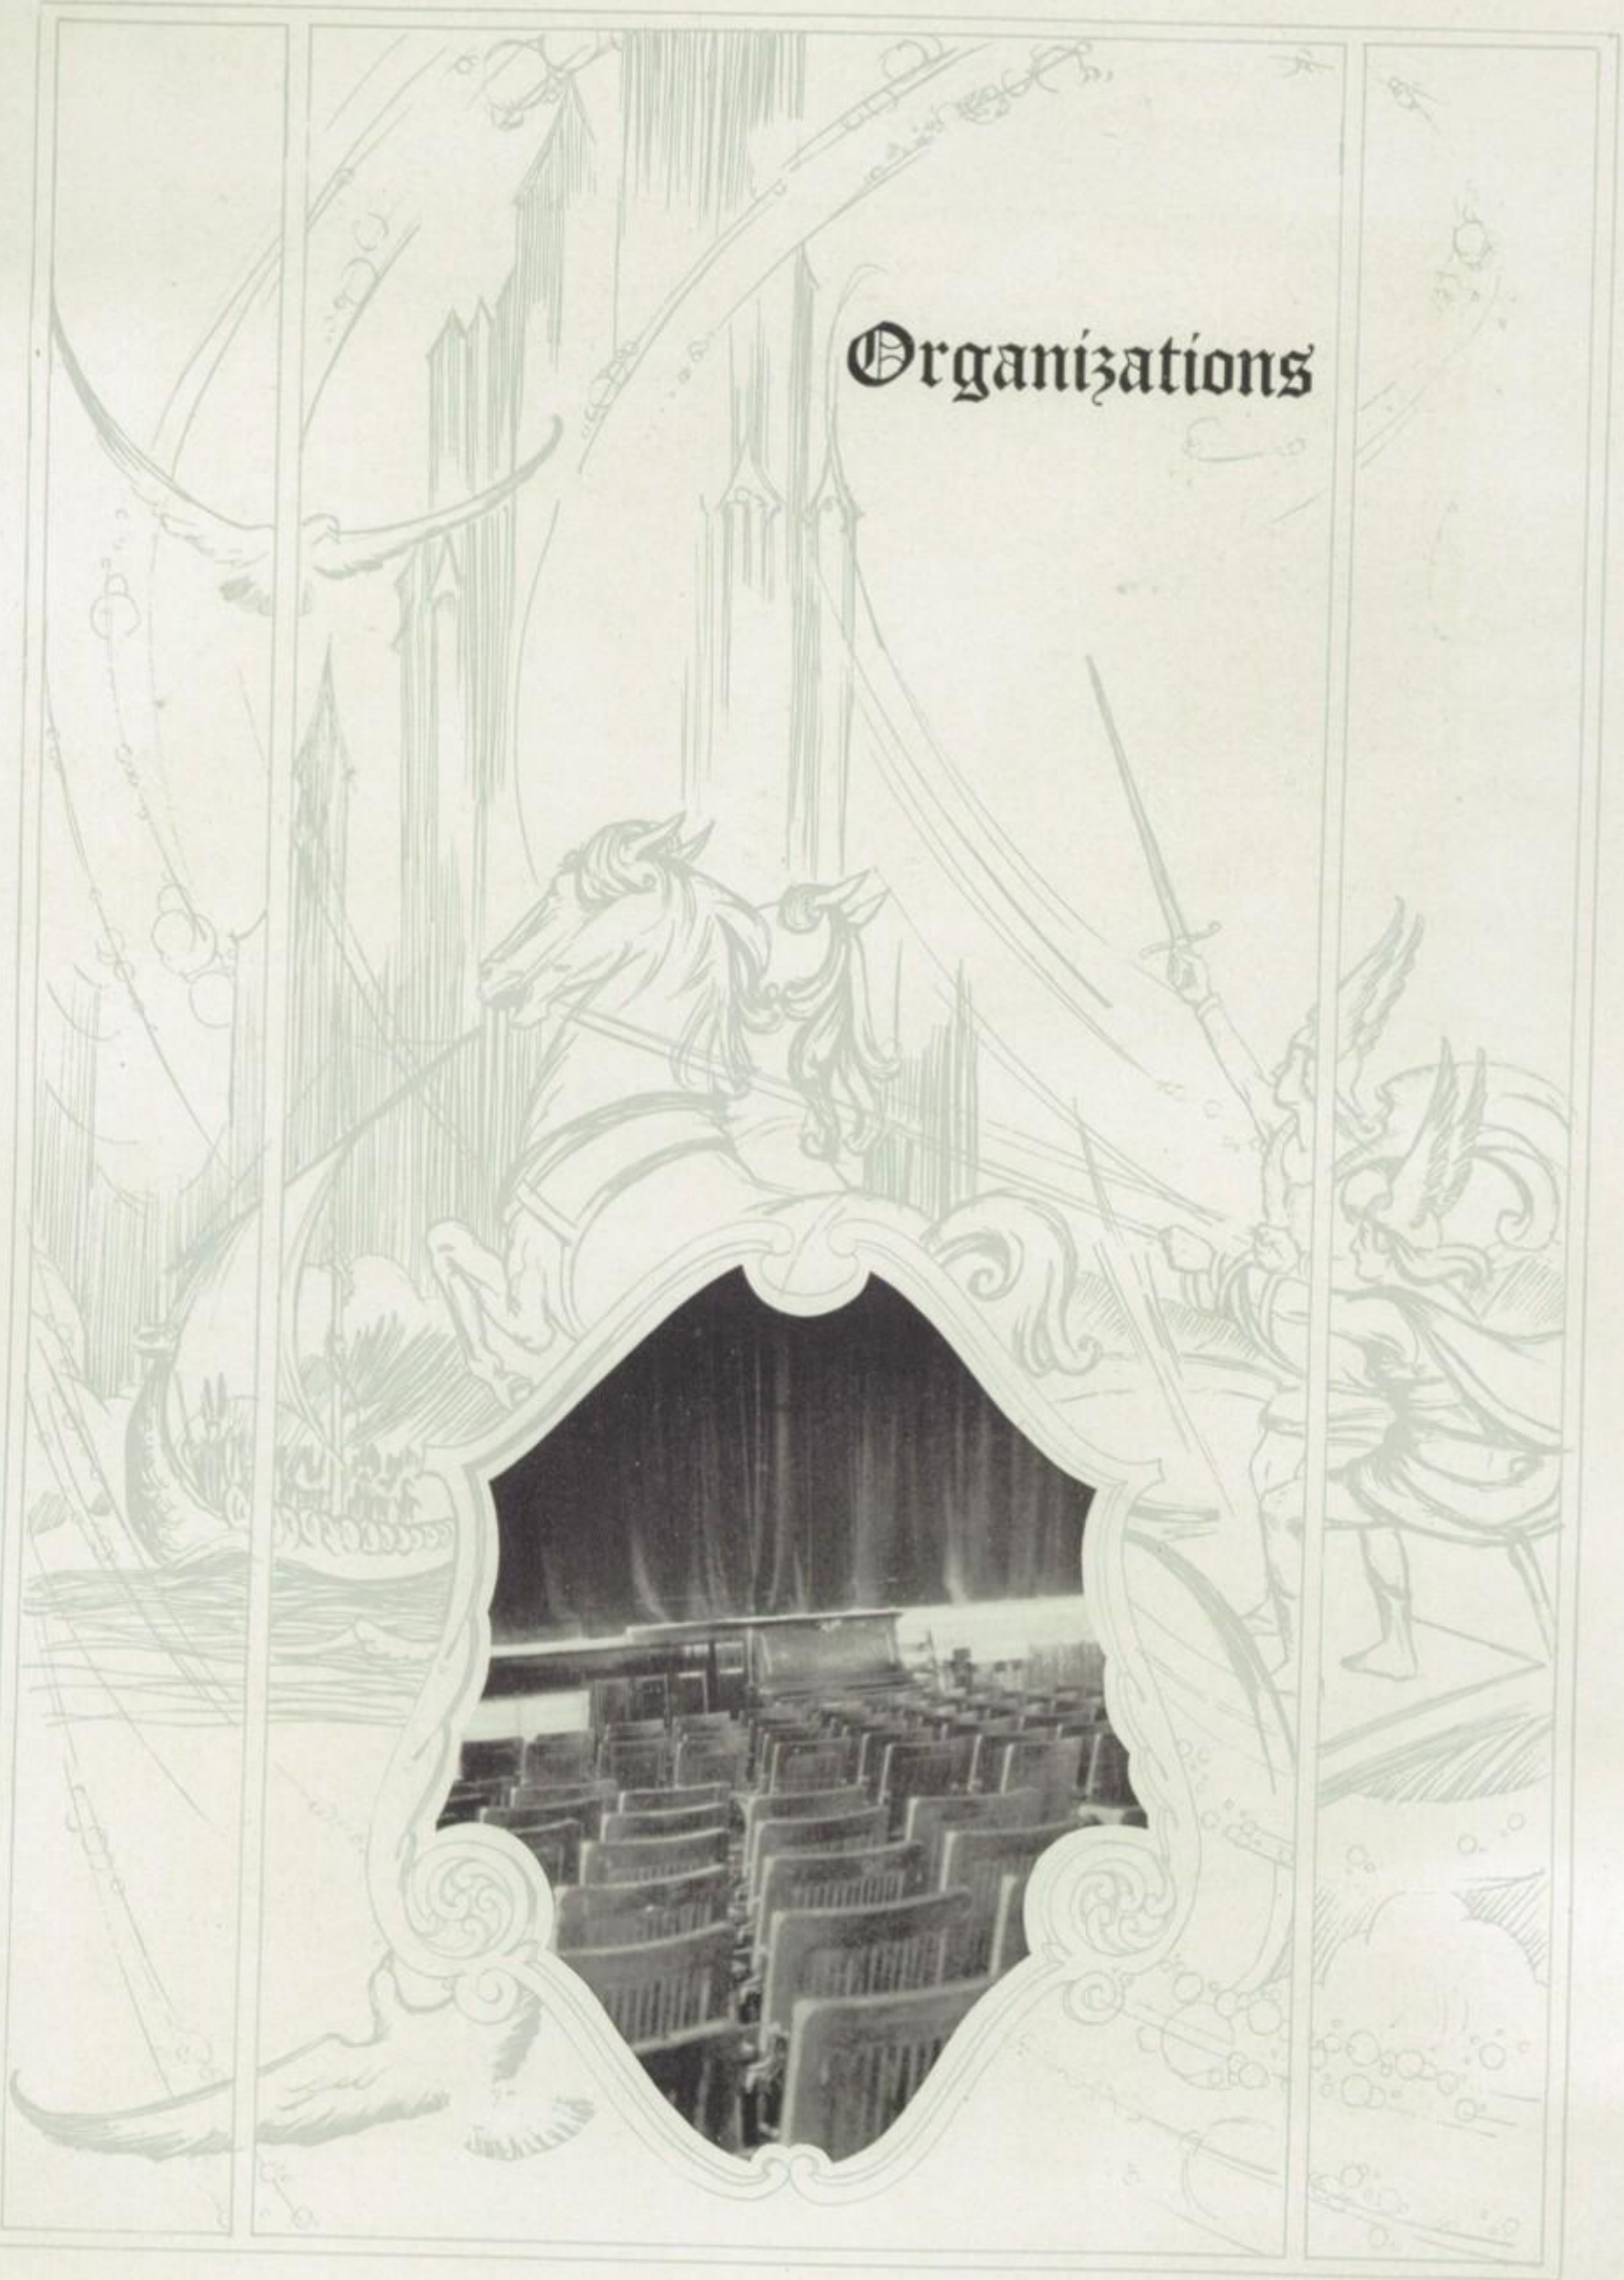

Mr. Dunstan smiled benevolently and remarked to Mrs. Blair that she had a very attentive class.

Mrs. Blair collapsed on a chair as the bell rang. She was saved. Sunday School was over.

Varsity Football

Lorain High's 1928 varsity football team made a creditable showing in competition last season. The local boys won five games, lost three and tied one.

The boys had to face a stiff schedule, and came through a stormy season to tie for third place with Elyria. The team opened well with victories over the strong Massillon eleven, 20-0, to dedicate the new Recreation Field. They breezed through River, but lost to Shaw, which, in a large part, was due to injuries, and lack of a scoring punch.

After a weeks lay-off, the locals suffered a 13-0 defeat at Sandusky, but they then began an upward climb. Barberton and Lakewood were toppled and the big Heights team came to town.

Lorain held Heights the first period, but the Hill-toppers scored a touchdown immediately after the opening of the third period, and Chizek kicked goal. Undaunted, the locals also scored a touchdown on a blocked punt, and Al Wright's boot was true.

In the last 45 seconds, Heights rushed the ball to Lorain's 20. Lorain held for 3 downs, but on the fourth down, Chizek stepped back to the 25 yard stripe, and calmly booted a place kick that ruined Lorain's championship hopes. Lorain nosed out Elyria the following Saturday 7-6.

The lettermen were: Andorka, Giasomo, Capt. Glorioso, Fabian, Ursic, Hageman, Urbanic, Romoser, S. Pincura, J. Pincura, Lepkowski, Chaszar, Jones, Neuman, Smith, Wright, and Ujhelyi.

Resume 1928 Varsity Football

With only two lettermen from the 1927 Lake Erie league championship eleven, the 1928 football team finished in a tie for third place with Elyria.

The Lavender and Purple showed unexpected strength in the season opener against an experienced Akron North team and battled to a scoreless tie.

The season's first victory was recorded when Recreation Field was dedicated to the tune of a surprising 20-0 victory over a strong Massillon eleven. In the opening minutes of play, Giasomo took a pass from Chaszar and romped 30 yards for the first touchdown of the year.

For the first time in six years the Lavender met defeat in league competition when Lorain travelled to Shaw, October 13. Whale broke through a crippled Lorain team for a lone touchdown.

Led by Krueger, fullback, Sandusky's champion Little Big Seven team, added Lorain's scalp 13-0. Against Barberton the following Saturday, the Lorain team again entered the win column 13-6, and repeated the dose to Lakewood a week later.

A great Cleveland Heights backfield was stopped, a great line plunging attack almost gave the locals a victory, but Chizek's forty yard place kick with 30 seconds to play broke the 7-7 deadlock. The game cinched the title for Heights, since Shaw lost to Elyria the same day.

Overcoming the five year Elyria jinx, the McCaskymen played a bang-up game to down their old rivals 7-6.

The season's record of five won, three lost, and one tied hardly indicates the strength of the team, since at least two games were practically even all the way.

Although not a single letterman was back from the 1927 team, Coach Tipton's Lighties had a fairly successful season in 1928. The team took fourth place in the league standing with a pair of wins and three defeats.

The locals had some tough breaks, two games being lost as a result of intercepted passes and another being tied. Defeats were sustained at the hands of Wellington, Shaw, Lakewood, and Heights.

Some glory was gained, however, by defeating Elyria and holding the strong Amherst team to a tie. The lettermen are as follows: Beers, Bohoric, Carlsen, Cinninger, Crehore, Devich, Erdy, Eyman, Capt. Homola, Jeambert, Kalb, Kohlmeyer, Lopatchick, Seneff, Sepsenwol, Webber, and Zimmerman.

Tennis

Although starting with a setback, the Lorain High tennis team completed a very successful season, finishing second in the league standing.

Under the direction of Coach Bash the team won all its matches but one; losing a hard fought contest to Lakewood, who later won the championship. The score of that match was 4-1.

This season was the first since entering the league that the strength of the team was so equally divided; this was well shown by the decisive scores of the last three matches. The doubles team of Newkirk-Mayhew finished the season with a perfect record.

There will be a great opening in the tennis ranks next season, for six of the seven lettermen will be lost through graduation.

The season record is as follows:

Playing heads-up basketball in the closing games of the season, Lorain High's cage warriors wound up a successful season in Lehi League competition to gain themselves a tie for second place.

The local cagers won three out of five contests in early competition, but began their league season with an 18-14 loss to River at River.

In a crucial contest at Shaw, the Red and Black managed to nose out the locals, 22-21, and thereby cinched the league championship. A victory over Heights, 19-14, tied the Lavender for second and closed the league schedule.

In the tourney Lorain went to Akron by defeating Euclid Shore and Bedford at Cleveland Heights, but lost to Canton McKinley at Akron.

The lettermen were: Capt. Hageman, Horkay, Capt.-elect Ursic, Andorka, Andrews, Smith, and Capt. Giasomo, Woods, and Danevich who graduated.

Lightweight Basketball

The Lorain Lightweight basketball team for the second time in three years captured the Lehi League championship. The team this year made the best record of any Lorain lightweight team, losing only one contest and winning twelve. A remarkable scoring record has been established by the squad; with the exception of two games the team has scored 30 or more points. Elyria inflicted the local boys' only loss at Elyria, February 8, by a score of 22-21.

Shaw was the big obstacle in the path of the Lorain boys but the locals administered two decisive beatings to the East Clevelanders 30-17 and 20-14. Elyria and Lakewood finished strong after slow starts to tie up second place three different ways. Heights won three games, and River did not get into the win column.

Jenkins and Horkay did stellar work for the Lorain boys, the latter playing both heavyweight and lightweight basketball. The lettermen were: Beers, Horkay, Capt. Jenkins, Seneff, Shiff, Skolnicki, and Vaszily. Eyman won a letter but graduated in mid-year.

Track

The stars of the track team this year were veterans of the last year's team. Seven lettermen reported at the beginning of the track season, Andrews, Aros, Gethin, O'Mahen, Palovich, and Willis.

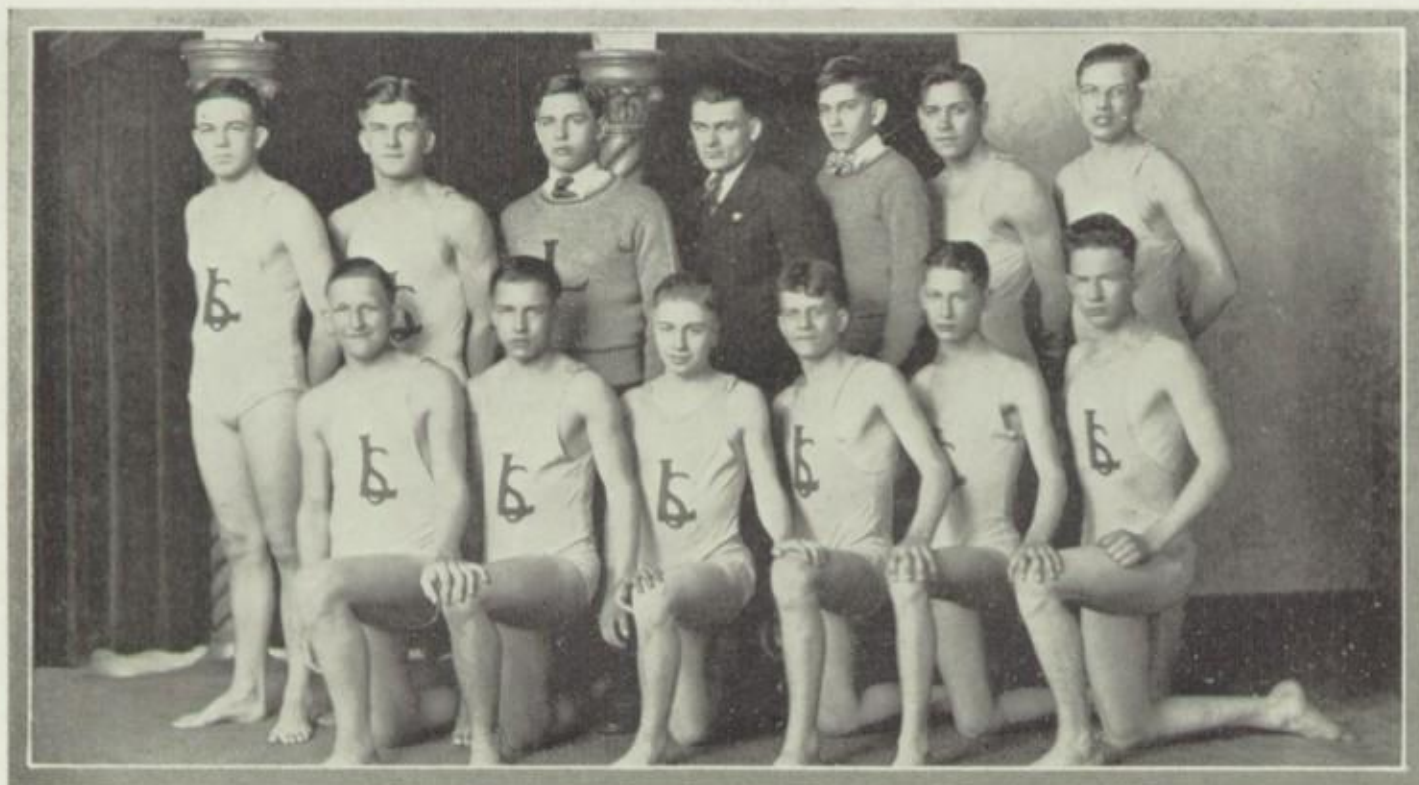

The team was ably captained by Julius Aros who experienced his third and most successful year as a trackman. O'Mahen another three year man also finished his career as a Lorain High trackman successfully.

In league competition the team faired well in spite of the staff opposition offered by the league teams.

In spite of the loss of the backbone of our present team by graduation, the prospects for next year look good. With Andrews, Willis and Palovich back, and a large number of likely runners who have not as yet won a letter, we can feel that we have prospects of a successful season in spite of the loss of Aros, Gethin and O'Mahen.

The Boys' Swimming Teams

Despite the fact that only two lettermen were back to form the nucleus of the swimming team, the squad finished third in the Lake Erie Standings, just one point behind Cleveland Heights.

Lorain had seven dual meets and two league meets. Of the seven dual meets, Lorain won four and lost three.

Lakewood won the league meet, with Cannon, their star dash man, taking three firsts and also breaking seven records.

Kohlmyer was the outstanding star for the Lorain team, garnering many points during the season.

Coach J. P. Seiders, physical director of the local Y. M. C. A., was very well pleased with the final results, and predicts a better showing next year. All home contests were held in the "Y" pool.

At the end of the season, the following earned their letters: Kohlmyer, G. Monos, L. Monos, Pierce, Reid, Stephenson, Lynn, Baldwin, J. Urbas, and Bower.

The lettermen that are back for this year's nine are: Hageman, Lepkowski, Pryzchocki, Captain Smith, and Willis.

In the picture the players are as follows:

Hageman, Capt. Smith, Pryzchocki, Willis, Lepkowski, Chaszar, Golinsky, Jenkins, Skolnicki, Andorka, Perrit, Seneff, Horkay, Lopatchick, Grubic, Ujhelyi, Ursic, S. Pincura, J. Pincura, Burkhart, Lewis, Moll, Homola, Beal, Senie, and Fickes.

Hockey is beginning to challenge basketball as a girl's sport.

MERCEDES R. MARTIN

Mercedes Martin was the girl chosen from the 1928 B class of Lorain High as the girl contributing the greatest services to L. H. S. during her four years of school life.

Mercedes starred in dramatic club productions and took part in three operettas. She was a member of the French, Latin, Stratford and Debate clubs, and also took part in the Shaw and Sandusky league debates.

Not only prominent in club work but taking an active part in Hi-Standard work and athletics proved Mercedes versatility.

She achieved the feat by becoming a member of the girls "L" club. This is a high honor for it usually means four years of hard work.

In these, and other ways Mercedes performed services for Lorain High and won the coveted honor of having her name engraved on the Senior Service Cup.

The boy honored by having his name placed on the Senior Service Cup from the class of 1928 B, was Alfred Friesenhengst.

Alfred belonged to the Senate, the German club, of which he was president, the Math., and Social Science clubs.

He took part in the pageants and operettas. He also played the violin in the league music contests.

It was as advertising and business manager of both the Hi-Standard and the Scimitar staffs, that Alfred performed his greatest service to his school.

Alfred also served as an usher and was a Senior A-B banquet host.

Following his graduation from High School, Alfred won a scholarship to Western Reserve. This was a signal honor in that he defeated a number of other candidates competing for the same prize.

Senior Service Cup

To Grace Hug was awarded the honor of having her name placed on the Senior Service Cup from the class of 1929 A.

Grace was not only an excellent scholar but she was also prominent in school affairs.

She was elected to the National Honor Society in her Senior B year. Grace belonged to the Chemistry, Stratford, German, Glee, Social Science, and Biology clubs. As a member of the Debate Teams she participated in the Sandusky and Shaw debates, and was also assistant debate coach.

By virtue of winning the Sophomore Declamation Contest, Grace gained permanent membership in the Girls' Council, and was elected president of the organization in her senior year.

Through hard work Grace proved her merit, and showed herself worthy of the honor given her.

GRACE S. HUG

JAMES GLORIOSO

James Glorioso, captain of Lorain's football team, was the boy chosen from the class of 1929 A to have his name placed on the Senior Service Cup.

Besides being captain of the football team James was a member of the Rifle and Glee clubs. He was a banquet host and participated in the pageants.

James rendered the school valuable service by serving as stage manager for two years. This is a hard job and takes a willing worker to accomplish it.

Poster drawing was another way by which James served the school. His colorful drawings were always in evidence whenever a play or operetta was to be given.

James served his school in a variety of ways and in the eyes of the faculty was worthy of the honor given him.

The National Honor Society

To be chosen a member of the National Honor Society is one of the highest honors that can be conferred on a student of Lorain High School. In order to make the National Honor Society a continuous organization, in the Spring of 1926 the custom of choosing only Senior A's was changed to that of choosing a few members of the Senior B class for membership in the organization. Students are chosen on the basis of Scholarship, Character, Service, and Leadership.

VICTOR DOBRAS

From the class of 1929-A Blanche Moos, Joan Garver, Victor Dobras, Grace Hug and Edward Korejwo were chosen during their senior B year. Victor Dobras was elected president, Joan Garver, vice-president and Blanche Moos, secretary-treasurer. Other members from the 1929-A class that were chosen are, Thomas McCartney, Jean McGill, Alvin Krieg, Margaret Wickens, Hilda Ebinger, Mary Louise Price, Joseph Molnar, and Oliver McCahon.

and social meeting, at which time all the members of the National Honor Society are invited to attend, and the parents of the newly elected members also are extended invitations. It is at this meeting that the Senior B's from the class of 1929-B chosen for membership in the society are formally inducted. They were Carl Hageman, Bruce Baldwin, Wayne Conn, Cletus Carver, Dorothy Boone, Adeline Heisner, and Pauline Novak. At the same time, a team composed of Margaret Bender, Catherine Grall, Meyer Goldberg, Erma Manson, and Vera Thompson, with Annette Goldberg and Elizabeth Kurtz as alternates, won from Lakewood 3-1.

The Debate Teams

The question discussed in the inter-scholastic debate this year was, Resolved, That the jury system be abolished in civil cases in the state of Ohio.

Adeline Heisner and Cletus Carver, with Jack Goldberg as the alternate, were chosen to uphold the affirmative in the discussion, while the negative case was presented by Maude Stinson and Robert Amsden, with Hyman Shiff as alternate.

All members of the debate club were eligible. To be considered for the debate, the pupils had to prepare a speech and write a brief on the subject of the debate.

In the home contest, the affirmative team was defeated by Lakewood, and the negative team lost a close decision to the Elyria debaters. The debate teams were coached by Miss Hardy and Mr. Bash.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Just three words, but they carry a world of significance. This "credit-line" on a news story indicates that that story is accurate, fair, thoro, and as complete as was possible at the time of publication.

The Associated Press is an association of great newspapers all over the country which maintains working agreements with every great news agency and have news bureaus in every great capital in the world.

The Associated Press, a purely co-operative service, represents no one group, no one person, and no one organization. It numbers among its members such leading newspapers as the New York Times, the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Kansas City Star, the Los Angeles Times, and the Chicago News and Tribune.

THE LORAIN JOURNAL is the only newspaper in Lorain-co which has an Associated Press franchise. It has just recently been admitted to membership.

YOUR GOAL! WHAT IS IT?

Everyone has some aim in life, if it's only an extra pail of oats. We're perfectly honest about ours. We want to give Lorain the best department store possible, and we want to make it the kind of store Lorain High School students think of when they want something.

Probably we make mistakes, but the point is we're trying. What's Yours?

March 4, 1929.

Dear Mr. Messmore:

The individual pictures of our pupils for the Scimitar are very satisfactory both to the pupils and to the art department of the Annual.

I wish to congratulate you not only on the quality of your work but on the speed with which you handled such a large number of boys and girls. I admit that when you told me you could take one hundred pictures per hour I doubted your ability to do it. The fact of the matter is you proved to me that you can take twice that many pictures in an hour. I am glad to recommend you to school officials.

You may use this letter in any way you see fit.

Very truly yours,

Personal Letter to Lorain High School Graduates for 1929

OFFICE OF
OBERLIN SCHOOL OF COMMERCE, Inc.

Oberlin, Ohio, May 25, 1929.

L. H. S. Seniors,
Lorain, Ohio.

Dear Friends:

Now that you are about to complete the High School course you are no doubt trying to decide what you will do after leaving High School. You are now approaching a turning point in your lives, for what you decide upon for the coming year will in all probability determine your success. Some of you will enter college and later prepare for one of the professions. A much larger number will enter business.

If you should decide upon a business career, which by the way offers even better opportunities than the professions, you must determine to make thorough preparation. Those who are poorly prepared will fail just as people fail in every other line.

I am writing you this personal letter to invite those of you who are interested in business training to come to Oberlin for it. This school has come to be regarded as one of the leading schools in its field. It is one of the few schools of business training in the United States having the college entrance requirement. Students from all over Ohio and a number of other states are coming to Oberlin for business training, for the reason that they prefer to study with others of their own age and education, where they will not be held back in classes with those who have had little and in some cases no High School training.

We are having this year one of the best years in our history. Students are in attendance from about seventy high schools located all over Ohio, and also from the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, California, Mississippi, Montana, Washington, New Jersey, North Dakota, Ontario, Canada, Michigan, and the Canal Zone.

Having only High School graduates we are able to offer more advanced courses of training. High School graduates can accomplish a great deal more in a school where all are High School graduates than in the average business college where many have had little or no High School training. The Oberlin School of Commerce is not only attracting a large number of High School graduates, but many who are graduates of Colleges or have had College training, are coming to Oberlin every year. The following Colleges and Universities are represented in this year's student body: Ohio State, Bowling Green, University of Utah, Oberlin, Culver Military Academy, De Pau University, Wittenburg College, Baldwin Wallace, and Capitol University. Many of the leading business firms of Northern Ohio look to Oberlin constantly for office help. Many of the prominent business men of the country made their preparation here. E. H. Blair, State Superintendent of Banks for Ohio, was graduated from this school thirty years ago. Several of the Bank Examiners of Ohio are also graduates of this school.

If you are anxious to succeed in the business world, no school in the country could offer you better preparation along business lines. Hundreds of L. H. S. graduates have been students here in the past, and several are here at the present time. Our Summer Term will open June 17th and our Fall Term September 3.

If you are interested in business training run over to Oberlin and visit our school.

Yours very sincerely,

J. T. HENDERSON,

President.
